Barrett students in
CONHI

Barrett, The Honors College at Arizona State University is a selective, residential college that recruits academically outstanding undergraduates across the nation. Named "Best Honors College" in the nation, this residential community focuses on students' academic achievement, professional development, and involvement in a larger community.

Interprofessional
Education for the 21st Century

Health care is changing. More and more, patient services must address complex, interdisciplinary factors like mental wellness, poverty and a rapidly aging population. CONHI's interprofessional degree programs emphasize the need to understand the causes, symptoms and community impacts of modern health challenges. With graduates going on to become regulatory compliance specialists, patient advocates and community health outreach specialists, CONHI makes sure you are prepared for a modern health career.

Student-Driven Success

BS Community Health

I've been really enjoying my courses and experience as a Community Health major. I have learned so many things such as leadership, teamwork, how to create social change and most importantly, how to communicate with various different communities. I love that with my major, I can make an impact on a larger population.

- Elizabeth Villanueva, Student

BS Health Innovation

The future of health care to me is actually really simple. It's about giving patients access to better health care, whether that means providing transportation to get to their health care provider or making sure there are no barriers to them accessing that health care.

- Jackson Dangremond, Downtown Student Body President

BS Health Care Compliance and Regulations

Compliance and quality are two sides of the same coin in health care – both revolve around “doing the right thing” to drive positive outcomes for everyone. I am thrilled to help students navigate toward their interests in HIPAA compliance, accreditation standards, auditing, policies and procedures, and other compliance pathways.

- Cris Wells, EdD, MBA, CCRP, Clinical Professor

BS Integrative Health

I pursued this program because my family has had a complex genetic history and I want to help others in their health journey. I want to make a difference in the lives of other people. I personally believe that one size does not fit all when it comes to health care. Integrative health gives people more choices when it comes to care. It allows patients to have a bigger voice in their care.

- Kelly Jasper, Graduate

BS Health Care Coordination

The BS program in health care coordination prepares students to effectively coordinate resources to optimize individual health outcomes. Graduates will have the ability to work with an interdisciplinary team and the patient to utilize resources, provide health education and be an advocate for the patient.

- Brenda Hosley, PhD, RN, CNE, Clinical Associate Professor

BSN Nursing

This is one of the premier institutions in the world. We know that we're the number one innovative university. And that speaks a lot to the program we have here, where we're constantly looking at new ways to do things that are very student-centric, and bring education to where our students need that education to be.

- Heidi Sanborn, RN, MSN, CCRN, Clinical Assistant Professor

Community Embeddedness

Student Engagement

Customize your CONHI experience and build meaningful connections with faculty, staff and students. Whether you're a residence hall community leader, student ambassador or Mentor for Academic and Personal Success, there are many opportunities for you to thrive with CONHI.

A two-day, one-night experience for incoming CONHI freshmen to engage with faculty, staff and upperclassmen and gain a better understanding of what it means to be part of the CONHI community.

An annual opportunity for students to present their research projects proposing innovative solutions to health issues, providing them experience pitching their research to peers.

CAMP CONHI

Health Innovation Exhibition

CONHI study abroad exposes students to real world health challenges and opportunities that face communities beyond the United States.

Study Abroad

Community Partners

CONHI is proud to offer our students the chance to connect with partner hospitals and organizations throughout Arizona. These opportunities ensure our graduates are prepared for real world challenges while supporting ongoing health efforts throughout our community.

Locations

In the heart of Arizona's capital, ASU's Downtown Phoenix campus creates strong academic and career connections for students with media, health care, corporate and government organizations. State-of-the-art living and learning facilities offer students a high quality academic experience woven into the Valley's metropolitan core.

At ASU's West campus, in northwest Phoenix, students study business, education, and interdisciplinary arts and sciences. Patterned after the University of Oxford's architecture, this inviting campus creates a close-knit community. Enhancing the student experience, the campus offers a residence hall, dining facility and recreation center.

Our online degree programs are effective, flexible and smart. Unlike a standard online lecture, ASU's online courses are highly interactive, engaging each student and ensuring the subject matter is fully understood. This structure facilitates interaction between classmates and our highly recognized faculty on campus.
